

Essay number 1 – writing Miles' essay

My question of life is: "Can I be entirely happy with my life?"

I got to this question by a Quote from John Lennon, which goes as the following: "When I was 5 years old my mother always told me that happiness was the key to life. When I went to school they asked me what I wanted to be when I grew up, I wrote down "happy". They told me I didn't understand the assignment and I told them they didn't understand life" Whether or not the Quote is true, it made me think and I came to the conclusion, that happiness is the key of a "good life" my primary question after that was can I get there.

But why is to getting to happiness the most important question? Well this question comes from the question "why do I live?" and is more or less the answer on that, to be happy. I think it is the most important question in my life, because happiness is the only way to be fully satisfied with your life and to enjoy it. And being happy is the sense of life.

So, can I be entirely happy with what I am doing and my life over all? No, at least not for all the time. There will be periods where you can be happy and feel like you are happy with everything at the moment, but after a while you will realise that in our current "world" and style of living you can't be happy with everything or everyone.

To answer the question I figured out that it is impossible to be happy with everything but you can get to the point, where you are happy with yourself.
